++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Becoming cold and clear for most.

Today:
Cloud, rain and milder air across southern half of the UK becoming confined to the southwest of England and west Wales. Cold and sunny elsewhere with a few wintry showers near coasts in far north and east.

Tonight:
Cloud and rain in southwest returning eastwards and becoming heavy across Northern Ireland, western Scotland and northwest England with a risk of sleet, snow and ice. Cold and clear elsewhere.

Wednesday:
Cold with rain, sleet and snow across northern UK, lasting most of the day in western areas. Further south, rain band moving east followed by milder but rather cloudy weather.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Remaining unsettled with areas of rain and snow pushing east, snow will mostly be confined to the hills. Rather cold in east areas, but generally milder in the west.
